 - A. MiNDful Training, Multicultural Student Programs & Services
 1. Slides here!
 1. Paige Jackson: The office of MSPS is located on the 2nd floor, in 210. We have offices and a coalition room available for you all for educational needs. There is a misconception that multicultural student programming and services are only for students of color. We welcome all students to our events. I would recommend hanging the spirit of inclusion in your office because it is reflective of our values. What are the senate's shared values? I think unpacking that question can be fruitful in determining what kind of action and representation we need. I want to highlight that racial microaggressions can go different ways, they can be intentionally or unintentionally harmful.

2. Paul Stoller: What do you mean by socialized?
3. Paige Jackson: How you were raised.
4. Paul Stoller: What are some resources to target ignorance?
5. Paige Jackson: It depends on what area you want to explore. Have you explored your whiteness?
6. Paul Stoller: No. What does that mean?
7. Paige Jackson: You can study what it means to be a white American. I always say start with yourself and understand your own implicit biases.
8. Daniel Schermerhorn: Do you have any tips on combating the intellectual inferiority microaggression?
9. Paige Jackson: That one is hard. I would report that or speak to a dean in those types of situations. I would be as specific as possible. If you do want to have a conversation with someone, you have to keep in mind that power dynamic. It's always good to have a third person there as well, especially when it concerns a student's grade.
10. John Bailey: One of the freshmen in my dorm wants to be integrated into dorm life, but only feels comfortable with friends from his cultural organization. Is there anything I can do to help integrate him?
11. Paige Jackson: I would encourage you to meet him where he's at, maybe go to his cultural club that he does feel comfortable with.
12. Madison Nemeth: Do you guys have the back of the phone stickers?
13. Paige Jackson: We're getting more.

VI. New Business

A. SO 2122-04: An Order To Amend The Constitution To Establish An Electoral Code

1. David Haungs: The first one is about establishing an electoral code and making that more accessible for students. It's a change in where they are located. Move article 15 into its own section

B. SO 2122-05: An Order To Amend The Electoral Code's Procedures For Allegations And Results

1. David Haungs: This is a streamlining process about electoral allegations and results to make sure results are coming out in a timely manner. Electoral code moves article 15 in the election section to its own body of legislation. The other order shortens the time window during which allegations can be made, gives the senate the ability to make meaningful appeals decisions, and standardizes the process of releasing information related to allegations.

D. Gateway and Transfer Student Resolution

1. Daniel Schermerhorn: I have decided to head a resolution on the Gateway and transfer housing decision to ensure housing for students in the Gateway program. We want to work on the unification of the student body and basic student equality. If you are interested in being a cosponsor, let me know.

VII. Announcements
