

Table or Postponement Rule Resolution

Drafted 5 April 1998

Whereas measures are often debated and reviewed by the Senate many times before coming to a vote.

Whereas this debate is often circular and achieves little or no alteration to the measure.

Whereas the tabling of such measures often occurs to suspend discussion of the topic and increases the number of Senate meetings in which a measure is debated.

Therefore be it resolved that after being tabled or postponed a total of three times, a measure must come to a vote of passage or rejection. In the event of continuous significant changes to the resolution, the vote of passage may be delayed by a motion to suspend the vote by a simple majority vote of the Senate.
